them arrested. What is probable cause in a setting such as this? The librarian says, I saw the person with a book; I thought it was ours. He or she did not check it out, so I arrested them. When I went to them to discuss it, they refused to let me see the book. It would be like me getting ready to walk out of the bank and they would say, Ernie, I think you stole some money. Let me count what you've got in your billfold. If you didn't steal it, you wouldn't mind letting me count it. I'd be so insulted, I'd probably attempt to knock the person down.

PRESIDENT: One minute.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: So if I have a book of my own and they're going to come to me and tell me that's my book, give it to me, they're not going to get it and they're not going to see it, so I can be arrested. And as a result of sloppy action or poor observation or improper approach to a citizen by a library employee, an arrest can be occur...can take place. And I'm sure they would say, yeah, there was probable cause. If you weren't doing something wrong, you should consent to have your privacy invaded by this person and go along with what they want you to go along with. I don't think the provision is wise. I don't believe that it's necessary. And I hope that the Legislature rejects this proposition. You've already given them the right to go to court in a civil action and make a person pay attorney fees and court costs which will go to the benefit of whoever. So I think that is sufficient.

PRESIDENT: Senator Beutler, there's 15 seconds left on our time.

SENATOR BEUTLER: Is this my closing, Mr. Speaker?

PRESIDENT: Yes.

SENATOR CHAMBERS: No, it's not.

PRESIDENT: It is not a closing but I am telling you time has expired on the consent calendar.
